Dear Hiring Manager,

Great product design is never just about clean aesthetics; it is about translating complex business challenges into intuitive, high-converting digital ecosystems that drive growth and user retention. Over the past 5+ years, I have built my career around that exact philosophy. Whether architecting enterprise SaaS platforms and EdTech dashboards at Morgen Green Limited or scaling high-traffic e-commerce experiences at Ajiroba Technologies, I specialize in taking products from 0-to-1 and scaling them for measurable business impact - such as delivering a 89% boost in platform performance and usability, and a 77% increase in user satisfaction.

What sets me apart from traditional designers is my full-stack technical fluency. In addition to advanced expertise in Figma, design systems architecture, user research, and PRD authoring, I possess hands-on engineering experience with Figma, HTML/CSS, JavaScript, React, SQL, and Power BI. This rare hybrid skillset allows me to bridge the gap between design strategy and technical execution effortlessly. I speak the language of product managers, collaborate natively with software engineers to cut handoff friction to zero, and can even code production-ready interfaces or model data pipelines when required.

I am eager to bring my background in cross-functional leadership, scalable design governance, and data-informed decision-making to a forward-thinking product team. My goal is to help streamline your design-to-development pipeline, eliminate user friction, and elevate your core product experiences to drive long-term business value.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how my user-centered approach, technical capabilities, and passion for scalable design systems can directly benefit your team. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Alex Oluwaseun Akinjiola
